

EATING CLASSED IN NEW YORK AS AN AMUSEMENT

Millions of Dollars Are Invested to Supply Desires of Patrons.

Cabarets Range From Cellars to Splendid Gardens on Roofs.

By Frederic J. Haskin.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—Eating is here classified as a sport. Dinner, which is regarded as a necessity to be satisfied in the least possible time west of the Mississippi, and largely as a family affair south of the Potomac, here become a public amusement capitalized at millions. Broadway, if you can visualize the number of restaurants along, above and beneath it, is seen as one immense feeding trough where tens of thousands nightly gather from the ends of the earth.

The typical Broadway cabaret, from the little one in the cellar, where a couple of retired chorus girls form the entertainment feature, to the big one on the roof, which has enough song and dance people to equip a musical comedy for the road, is primarily a system for helping the ubiquitous itinerant to part from his change. The man from somewhere else goes there in the expectation of being thrilled and shocked by the night life of the great white way, and sees little besides himself in all his amazing variety.

But move away from Broadway, penetrate inland from that main river of the transients, and you will find that dining is still a ceremony and sport wherever you go. There are eating places for every taste, pocketbook and nationality, every degree of vice and virtue, eating places that appeal to every fettle and weakness.

If, for example, you share the almost universal desire to consort with the wealthy, you can achieve the sensation, if not the fact, by going to one of those pompous Fifth avenue places where "subdued elegance" is the prevailing note. The manner of the headwaiter, the color of the furniture, the music of the orchestra, the speed of the service, everything except the cost, is extremely subdued. You can dine in serene, attenuated and ostentatious boredom, your only amusement being to look at the spectacle about the queer exhibits that inhabit the place. There are all sorts and they are hard to classify. You know that the reputation of the establishment. But it is hard to tell who is which.

The next step in your gastronomical wanderings will probably be a trip into the historical. The modern New Yorker is a crank on the subject of old New York. It is hard to discover just exactly what old New York is, or what period is thereby denoted, but at any rate there are whole libraries on the subject, and societies organized to study it; and like everything else in New York, it has been capitalized and converted into eating places. How that mythical being, the Old New Yorker, may have talked and walked and worked and amused himself is a matter for research and speculation, but his restaurants have been abundantly preserved and restored. You can breakfast just off Fifth avenue in a dilapidated inn, the walls of which are fairly bedizened with relics of the departed great; you can lunch in a tavern where George Washington stopped, and take your afternoon tea in a genuine colonial coffee house, where the local color consists of a number of long mirrors, some very authentic looking old oil paintings in which the figures are shrouded in deep gloom, and a corps of genuine indigenous waitresses, speaking good English and clad in costumes of some period indeterminate but obviously remote. Most of these places, however, are only a little off the beaten track, and you can tell at a glance that a majority of the patrons are in your own class.

Determined still to discover the truly exotic phases of New York, if you have a sound digestion and a truly adventurous spirit, your next assault will probably be upon the foreign table d'hôte. You will climb the time worn steps of an old brownstone front and pass through the hallway and reception room, into what was once the backyard of some respectable citizen, but is now dignified by the name of a summer garden. Here you are certainly in an atmosphere remote from Broadway. The waiters speak no English, and a good many of the patrons chatter and gesticulate in some alien language, putting their immense black bottles of red wine on the ground beside their chairs. But here, too, is the inevitable rubberneck, the man who like yourself, doesn't really belong, and can neither tell what the dishes are nor ask the waiter. Furthermore, that wild Bohemianism that you read about it still lacking. The place is as orderly as a Sunday school. The worst shock you receive is when the waiter serves the cheese before the dessert.

And so up and on with the quest, perhaps this time to Washington Square and Greenwich village, that storied section where genius basks and the caffeine intellectuals live their barum barum lives (see any book on the subject). This is where Tom Paine starved and Poe wrote the "Fall of the House of Usher." Robert Louis Stevenson and Mark Twain used to sit here in the square and discuss all things under the sun with incomparable brilliancy. They would find strange company there now. It swarms with Italians and Jews, and hordes of the offspring of both of those, and a number of other races fill it with a shrill babble. But a few blocks away is Gonfalone's which we mention, by name, because O. Henry did so, remarking that the place was a literary landmark. It has thereby become a literary landmark by reputation at least, and the fact is abundantly set forth in its advertisements. Beyond a doubt, it is calculated to give the wandering provincial a considerable impression of the unusual. The place has a look of time-stained age. The orchestra consists of three Italian women and a songstress who renders classical selections, but gets most of her applause when she answers an encore with "Where the River Shannon Flows."

A good many patrons are obviously foreign and there is quite a sprinkling of long haired, queer-looking chaps, but you can tell at a glance that the buyer from Kokomo has penetrated even into this retreat. These Philistines may be easily selected from among the true habitués when the vernacular is served. There are some present who do the real Italian sword swallowing stunt, as though they had been raised on the stuff. Others, who are experienced but not skilled, carefully and conservatively cut it into little bits. But watch the man from somewhere else, who never before saw the famous Italian dainty served full length, but whose self-confidence is equal to any task. With some difficulty he winds it around his fork, lifts it on high and strives to engulf it at a swoop, like a bass after a minnow. But almost invariably, one or perhaps two of the supple strands about 18 inches long, become disengaged, and the rash adventurer's maneuvers for the next 30 seconds draw grave and disapproving consideration from three tables on either hand. Disillusioned but not discouraged, for your next meal you penetrate still farther into the wilderness of Greenwich, up the famous MacDougal alley, locally known as the Rabbit Hole. Almost by accident you discover a weather-worn sign over an ancient basement door, and dashing, with a sense of adventure, you enter. Through a dark and narrow hallway you reach a little three-cornered niche between tall buildings. On one side you see through opened windows into a row of studios. On the other you get a glimpse of the inner workings of a pickle factory. This sequestered spot has been made shady by the spreading of a great striped awning, and is furnished with bare deal tables and kitchen chairs. It looks like a hangout of thieves. But those who come here are of a most respectable appearance—young ladies armed with immense portfolios, wearing square-toed shoes and last year's hats and expressions of abstract contemplation, and thoughtful young men with bow ties and manuscript cases. Presently there enters a tall, stoop-shouldered chap, who looks about, hangs his hat and sticks on a rusty nail in the wall, sinks into a chair and lights a cigarette. He has a lined and careworn countenance; his eyes are concealed by dark glasses and above them towers a brow as shining and conspicuous as a boarding-house door knob. His expression is one of deep meditation—or perchance of boredom. He fairly radiates an atmosphere of lofty cerebration. At last, you feel, you are in the haunts of the truly intellectual.

Toward the end of your meal in comes a short, blonde happy looking person, who approaches this mental giant and dashing smites him on the back.

"Hello, Bill," he almost shouts. "What in the dickens are you doing in this queer joint?" Bill exhales a cloud of smoke and turns upward a look of green-goggled ennui.

"O, just trying to find something amusing in this blame town. By the way, Jake, are you buying missus' skirts long or short for the fall trade?"

Truly, the type and symbol of the New York crowd is the Guy From Somewhere Else!

THE IDLER

A marriage license was granted this morning to Carl William Mulcahy, clerk at the Lake Erie shops, and Wesale Vera Gulletta, stenographer at the Delsel-Wemmer factory.

SCHOOLS SHOW AN INCREASE OVER THE 1915 ENROLEMENT

"Johnny! Oh, Johnny! It's time to get up." This is the cry that greeted many young children in the city this morning, as it was the call of mother announcing the fact that vacation time is over and appearance of school books under the arms of the children, people instead of baseballs, tennis rackets dolls and other popular playthings.

Superintendent Collins announced today that the attendance on the first day of the school year exceeds by 107 the total attendance on the first day of the school year last year. The total attendance in different schools of the city was 5,000 today.

Helen Beatrice Hull, 2-year-old daughter of Melvin Hull, residing 2 1/2 miles southeast of South Warsaw, was almost instantly killed on Sunday afternoon, when a bullet from the shot-gun her father was cleaning, penetrated her body, entering near the heart, and came out between the shoulders.

The father declares he did not know the gun was loaded. A door between the kitchen and dining-room was closed. He was in the kitchen. The bullet penetrated the door and struck the child, who was in its path.

Funeral services were held this afternoon. Burial was at Walnut Hill cemetery, near New Hampshire.

The body will be accompanied tonight to Chicago, where funeral services will be held and interment made.

Fortunately, America can play her part in the days to come unselfishly and impartially, because she covets nothing that other nations have unless it be their skill and knowledge in some of the undertakings of science and industry, and these things she can obtain not by conquest of force, but by the mere careful use of the extraordinary capacity of her people. She can produce like skill and knowledge for herself. That is one of the things these days of struggle and interrupted trade have taught her. She has nothing that she wishes to take away from the other nations of the world, and she is better prepared than she ever was before to make rich contribution to the development of other nations.

CRIMINAL COURT CASES.

AT THE ORPHEUM.

Lima people seemed to welcome the return of vaudeville, if attendance at the opening performance at the Orpheum theater yesterday means anything. Plenty of good laughing material in the program offered for the opening three days of the season. Will Stanton and Co. offer a laughable skit entitled "His Last Drop." The Bennington Sisters in a neat refined singing act also came in for warm approval. Clark and La Vere in a singing, talking and musical offering proved to be one of the laugh providers on the bill. The Morenos, in an acrobatic dancing act, demonstrate much skill in the art. Strassel's animals, consisting of trained seals, a pony and dogs, interested both the children and grown ups. The same bill will be offered today and tomorrow.

He's a Conqueror When He Is in Germany.

The object of legislation which organized labor has sought to obtain is always to establish larger and better opportunities for life and freedom. Organized labor does not seek through legislation to do things for the workers that they can do for themselves. It only seeks to establish for them opportunities. This principle applies to workers in private industry. In the case of workers in governmental employment where the government is the employer and conditions of employment can be fixed only by legislation then the organized labor movement seeks to do something more than merely establishing opportunity. It must secure legislation regulating conditions of employment.

The record of the legislative achievements of the labor movement since 1906 when non-partisan political party was inaugurated, is one of splendid victories. The two most important are the Seaman's Act and the labor sections of the Clayton Anti-trust law. The greatest thing in both of these acts is the advancement of human freedom.

The problem of human freedom was not ended by the work of Lincoln. There still remained a class bound to involuntary servitude, the seaman. The Seaman's Act brings freedom to these workers. It makes America soil sacred to freedom, a country upon which a bondman may not step without losing his legal fetters. Freed and given an opportunity to protect themselves, the seamen are pressing their demands for higher wages and better conditions. Section 6 of the Clayton Anti-trust act contains the most advanced concept of freedom. "The labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce." According to old time philosophy, political economy, and legal thought, labor power was a commodity and article of commerce in no way different from coal, potatoes, and iron. Under this concept the most recent attempts have been made to hold workers in oppression and under the domination of employers, but the power to produce commodities is something different from the commodity of labor. It is personal, human, a part of life itself. Under the concept that labor was a commodity, and therefore property, employers have tried to repress efforts of workers for progress and for larger liberty by punishing these efforts under antitrust legislation and by attempting to restrain them through the injunctive process. It was to protect the workers against these abuses and to establish recognition of the concept that the workers and all of their attributes were human, that the labor sections of the Clayton act were enacted. In addition to these big achievements, many other important humanitarian laws have been enacted by congress increasing in number with every session of congress since the 56th session.

As Labor day 1916 came in one of the most critical political campaigns since the Civil war period, it is well to call attention to the big issue of the campaign which has a national, as well as an international relation. The issue is the attitude of the political parties toward questions of humanity and human welfare. The party now in power has in its legislative achievements placed the highest valuation upon human life and human attributes, that has ever been declared and enacted by any political party in power.

The question that concerns the workers is how to hold their present advantages and how to secure from political parties still greater opportunities for freedom. The thing which is fundamental is section 6 of the Clayton Antitrust act, the labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce. The representatives of the American Federation of Labor went to the political parties and asked them to declare themselves upon this principle. The answers that the political parties gave are in their platform where all may read.

The democratic party openly and favorably declared and emphasized its position. The republican party took no notice of labor's request that they declare themselves upon that which the workers considered of greatest importance to them.

Shortening the period of work lengthens the period for development and for all of the other activities that belong to the normal individual. Increases in wages give the workers the means for taking advantage of the increased opportunities of the shorter workday. The workers of short hours and better wages become very different citizens from those who are so exhausted by the daily grind that they have neither the time nor the energy for thought or aspiration. These gains mean better homes, better food, better clothing; time and opportunity for the cultivation of the best and the highest that is possible in the life of man.

Economic achievements are the basis upon which the workers can secure social and political progress. The power which secures these achievements is the power that will secure justice for them in every other relation. Shorter hours and higher wages give the opportunity and the means to live better more purposeful lives.

Power through economic organization means political power. There must be an economic basis in order to give political activity reason for existence and a program. By organizing its economic power to secure political protection and by adhering strictly to a nonpartisan political program, the American Federation of Labor has won glorious legislative victories.

Gompers Calls Union Labor to the Support of President Wilson

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, in a Labor Day message to workers of the United States, practically pledged the federation to support of the democratic party in the November elections. Mr. Gompers urged support of President Wilson and of the president's Mexican policy, on the ground that the one is the only president who has worked for justice for labor since Lincoln, and the other is the only policy that offers "opportunities for freedom and for independence."

The Labor Day message follows: (By Samuel Gompers).

Labor Day, 1916, brings to the workers of America the right to cheer and confidence in the trade union movement. There have been tests and crises that have proved its fundamental principles; there have been opportunities that have tested its practical efficiency. Through them all the trade union movement has made sure progress and gained in confident vision for the future.

Every national and international, every local union affiliated to the American Federation of Labor has made definite progress in securing for its members greater advantages in those things which are fundamental of betterment in all relations of life. In some organizations the success has been phenomenal.

Taking the labor movement as a whole, there has been greater progress in securing the eight-hour day or the shorter workday, than in any other similar period of time. The meaning of these victories can be interpreted only in the light of full understanding of the meaning of the eight-hour day. The shorter workday is something more than an economic demand. It is a demand for opportunity for rest, recuperation, and development; things which make life more than mechanical drudgery.

The workers whose whole periods are short are essentially different from those who are so worn by toil that they have neither energy nor mind for other things in life. They become more energetic, more resourceful workers with keener mentality and greater producing power. It inevitably follows that the shorter-hour workers are the best paid workers. With every reduction in hours there is always a corresponding increase in wages. Wherever demands for the shorter workday and higher wages have been presented and urged by organized workers during the last year, they have met with success. These economic gains have a potent relation to the social side of life.

Shortening the period of work lengthens the period for development and for all of the other activities that belong to the normal individual. Increases in wages give the workers the means for taking advantage of the increased opportunities of the shorter workday. The workers of short hours and better wages become very different citizens from those who are so exhausted by the daily grind that they have neither the time nor the energy for thought or aspiration. # THOMAS A. EDISON INDORSES WILSON FOR SECOND TERM against human slavery the United States worked out its salvation through revolution and it was a pretty slow trying process. It has been said that Wilson at first was against preparedness, perhaps he was, but when convinced that intelligent public opinion was overwhelmingly in favor of it, he changed. That is the proper thing for our presidents to do. A president defiant of public opinion would be a dangerous man in our government. His attitude on the tariff shows an equal openness of mind. A tariff commission will take the whole problem out of politics. It is my hope that experts will be named and that the body will be continuing and vested almost with the dignity of the supreme court. They say he has blundered. Perhaps he has. But I notice that he usually blunders forward. You can't get one hundred per cent efficiency in a democracy. We would be machines and we would have to sacrifice too much of freedom. As I said at the start, it has been just one big thing after another with Wilson. I have never known so many dangerous questions brought up for decision to any one president.

In my opinion Mr. Hughes, if president, would find it difficult to decide on the best course for the government to take in the railroad strike. His capacity for hindsight as we learn from his speeches is highly developed, but as to his foresight we are not equally well informed. Mr. Wilson has now had about four years of experience and he has earned faith and trust. I do not think it a logical or sensible thing to change to an inexperienced and untried man just for the sake of change or without much better reasons being given for the change than I have noticed. Roosevelt was my choice. He has had experience and is one of the best of Americans, but the machine controlled republican party would not have him. Therefore I am for Woodrow Wilson.

When Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies were first introduced, their curative powers were doubted and had to be proved. But the proof came, and gradually the use of them spread over the whole country. Now that hundreds of thousands of women have experienced the most beneficial effects from the use of these medicines, their value has become generally recognized, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the standard medicine for women.

The following letter is only one of the thousands on file in the Pinkham office, at Lynn, Mass., proving that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an article of great merit as shown by the results it produces.

Anamosa, Iowa.—"When I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I suffered with a displacement, and my system was in a general run-down condition. I would have the headache for a week and my back would ache so bad when I would bend down I could hardly straighten up. My sister was sick in bed for two months and doctored, but did not get any relief. She saw an advertisement of your medicine and tried it and got better. She told me what it had done for her, and when I had taken only two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my head began to feel better. I continued its use and now I don't have any of those troubles." Mrs. L. J. HANNAH, R.F.D. 1, Anamosa, Iowa.

WILSON AFFIXES HIS SIGNATURE TO 8-HOUR LAW

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—Labor day brought no cessation of activity of congress, which, having spent nearly all of last week on measures warding off the railroad strike, called for yesterday, hoped for a belated adjournment Wednesday or Thursday. Many members already had fled to political fields or their homes, leaving flag ends of legislation to be finished by depleted houses.

The Webb bill to allow American exporters to organize common selling agencies abroad, whose immediate passage President Wilson favors, the revenue bill and the Porto Rican citizenship bill were to be acted on by the senate.

Congressional leaders planned to postpone consideration of the immigration and corrupt practices bills and further railroad strike measures suggested by the president until the next session.

The eight-hour day act passed Saturday evening by a vote of 43 to 28, was considered a law today, having received President Wilson's signature yesterday, but to avoid any chance of its being held void on the ground that it received executive approval on a legal holiday, the president will sign it again today on his return from Hodgenville, Ky., where he attended Lincoln memorial exercises.

The president signed the bill Sunday in his private car at the Union station, where he stopped on his way from Shadow Lawn, N. J., to Hodgenville, Ky.

How long peace shall reign as a result of the bill apparently is dependent upon developments in the proposed move to test the constitutionality of the act. Should the railroads take no action, but await the beginning of an investigation for which the special commission for which the measure provides, the brotherhoods will remain inactive.

The employers' leaders declare, however, that should the law be held unconstitutional and the railroads attempt to restore the 10-hour day on their lines, a strike will follow promptly.

MISSED BALL GAME BUT STATE HOSPITAL INMATE AT LARGE

Abram Smile, an inmate of the Lima State hospital, who yesterday broke from the double line of prisoners marching to a ball game and disappeared into the woods near the hospital is still on the missing list.

All last night squads of guards searched the vicinity of the hospital in hope that he could be located in barns or other suitable hiding places. However, the search was unsuccessful, as they did not even learn the direction he went after disappearing into the woods.

According to officials of the hospital, Smile was in every way a model patient. He was sent to the institution from Hamilton county on a charge of second degree murder. He is of Turkish nationality.

DEMPSTER ARRAIGNED LIMA POLICE BEFORE COUNCIL SESSION

Republican Scores Safety Department for Its Non-Enforcement of Law.

An echo of the riot of last week was heard in the city council chamber last evening, with the arraignment of the Lima police by Councilman Dempster in the course of an attack on the "corner loafers" whom he holds responsible for such trouble. Dempster urged the enactment of an ordinance whereby the police could prevent the congregating of crowds of "cheap sports" on the streets, and hold the local police force to answer for not dispersing the mob of last Wednesday.

Little business was transacted by the session last night. Permission was granted the Pennsylvania to increase the number of tracks across Cole street, on condition that day and night watchmen be employed. A request from the company for permission to build stairways from the Union street tunnel to make trains more accessible was rejected. Objections to the proposed improvement of the D. T. & I. filed in a petition of east Wayne street residents were referred to the judiciary committee.

An ordinance authorizing the sale of the $100,000 river improvement bonds authorized April 25 at the primary election was passed by the council. The issue was at first considered unnecessary by some members after the report of Engineer Muller, which led to the virtual abandonment of the Sherman plan.

West Ohio Methodists Assemble In Annual Conference at Grace

Informal reception in the women's parlor of Trinity church Sunday forenoon, where many members of this church had an opportunity to shake hands with the well-known Methodist official.

Conference examinations were held yesterday afternoon and again this morning. These were conducted in Grace church. At the same time Bishop Thirkield and the cabinet were in session at Trinity church. The object of the meeting of the cabinet with the bishop is to arrange the appointments.

Formal Session Opens.

The conference was formally opened this afternoon. The celebration of the Holy Communion was followed by a memorial service, in which the ministers who have passed from labor during the year were honored. The address was by the Rev. O. L. Curl. Tomorrow morning the conference will be extended an address of welcome by Mayor B. H. Simpson and Bishop Thirkield will respond.

Grace Methodist church, where the conference is being held, is an ideal place for the conference. Its spacious auditorium, and balconies, with its fine pipe organ and choir, makes it a perfect meeting place. It is admired by all visitors. The accoutrements in the building add much to the pleasure of delegates and visitors at the convention.

"Old Glory," mounted on pedestals, floats at either side of the pulpit and ferns and greenery afford a pretty relief. In the back of the church, the Methodist Book concern has arranged desks, where are shown literary possible to a man of his capacity.

Bishop Thirkield was extended an their publications.

To the south, directly opposite the main entrance, but on the other side, cool, fresh water flows freely. In the basement the women of Grace church are serving both luncheon and dinner in the evening for a small sum of money.

Ministers are entertained in homes of the Methodist congregations in Lima and provided lodging and breakfast.

Interesting Night Session.

The session tonight will be missionary in its interests. The sermon will be by the Rev. D. N. Kelley of Marion, formerly pastor at Cairo and who is well known in Allen county. The anniversary of the board of foreign missions will be observed at 8:15 o'clock, when the address will be by Bishop Hartzell. The Rev. J. B. Ascham of Toledo, formerly of Delphos, will preside at the session tonight.

Tomorrow the session will get down to business in short order and strenuously pursue their work until the session is at an end.

Judge J. M. Killits of the federal court at Toledo, will be present at the session of the laymen's convention, to be held on Thursday. Prominent men in Methodism all over Northwestern Ohio will be here at that time.

By special request, Dr. Hannan has consented to conduct a thirty-five minute ministers' conference at the close of each of his lectures. The purpose is to discuss the preacher problems.

Those who are interested in the order of Kappa Sigma Pi, or Modern Knights of St. Paul, will be permitted to see the work demonstrated if they apply to Dr. D. H. Johnson, founder, for an admission ticket. The time and place will be at Olivet church on Friday at 7:30 o'clock.

The preachers' choir, led by Clifford Myers, met in Grace church this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The choir consists of ministers of the conference who are musically inclined.

The Rev. Warren J. Dunham, pastor, received a telegram today from Bishop Hamilton, who is connected with Washington university, that he will be present on Thursday and will address the conference at that time.

CARL ROWLANDS IS HOME FROM WEST, TIRED AND TANNED

Carl K. Rowlands, popular furniture dealer and member of the city council, returned to Lima last night from a trip to the western part of the United States. Although tanned and somewhat tired from the trip that consumed several months, he stated that it was very enjoyable.

The trip to the west was made in a motor car. J. W. Rowlands, his father, drove the car in which the two made the trip to the coast. It is the intention of the father to spend the winter in that part of the country.

On the journey of more than 4,000 miles to the destination at San Francisco, the motorists only received two punctures. J. W. Rowland will visit the different cities along the Pacific seaboard before returning to this city again in his automobile.

Morton and when the eyes beamed approvingly on her she knew she had succeeded. After the guests had left the table and Ethel was putting away the food preparatory to letting the little girl wash the dishes (she had hired Nell's maid to finish up the work), the old lady followed her into the kitchen and said as she smiled down on the flushed little cook:

"You did well. You will make a woman. I thought you had the stuff in you." Ethel felt repaid for all the hard work. After all the guests had departed and Mother Gordon had gone to her room, Ralph took the tired little woman on his knee and sat down before the dying fire.

"I was so proud of you," he whispered. "I never ate a better dinner, and to think my own little wife cooked it. It seems like a dream." He stroked the curly head. "Are you not very tired?"

"Yes, I am tired, but I never had a more happy day," she answered. "It is so splendid to feel that you are making things move; that you are a force in the world."

"I think the nicest thing about it is the feeling that we are yoke fellows," partners working together to carve out our future. We will surely succeed together."

The embers dropped into ashes as the two sat looking hopefully into the future.

ORGANIZED LABOR CELEBRATES DAY

Parade, Picnic and Speeches Features of Good Program.

For the first time in eight years organized labor yesterday celebrated Labor Day.

In the forenoon a big parade opened the festivities. Fifteen hundred men and women, members of 21 unions, marched from Wayne and West streets south to Circular, west to Main, north to Pearl, east to McCullough's park.

At the park the day was spent in eating basket dinners, athletic contests, dancing and visiting.

At 2 o'clock, after a concert by the Lima Municipal band and the Alstetter Family band, S. L. Newman, president of the Trades and Labor Council, introduced the speaker of the day, Max Hayes, editor of the Cleveland Citizen, and district organizer of the International Typographical Union. He gave a resume of the history of unionism in America, and made a strong plea for the complete organization of all workers.

He was followed by Willard Best, international organizer of the Cigar-makers' Union, who spoke along the same lines.

Zonite Destroys Disease Germs In Tooth Brush

Health boards are now waging war on unsanitary tooth brushes. Recent tests show that a new tooth brush after two weeks' use by a person of average habits will harbor millions of disease germs and sickness is constantly being introduced to the mouth. Zonite is a powerful germicide. It is the best and only practical product for this purpose. It is much more powerful than carbolic acid and yet is absolutely non-poisonous and leaves no taste. Put a few drops of Zonite on the wet brush after using and it will be perfectly disinfected in a short time. Germs cannot live in Zonite. If desired brushes may be soaked in water with Zonite added. This also applies to hair brushes. Most cases of baldness, dandruff and scalp eczema originate in unsanitary hair brushes; they should be disinfected regularly. Zonite has 100 vital uses in the home as Antiseptic, Disinfectant, Germ Destroyer and Deodorant. Home sizes 25c and 40c. Doctor's and Hospital size $1. At all Drug Stores.

A Short Electric Ride

AND GO DOWN TO BELLEFONTAINE FOR INFORMATION.

Jump on the Ohio Electric some day and run to the capital of Logan county if you want the correct data on municipal ownership.

After trying it out on electricity, gas and water as subjects for experiment, Bellefontaine residents can tell you how city ownership of public utilities works out.

Investigation by an expert, made for the Public Service Publishing company, two years ago, proves that the early records have been lost, and the later reports are incomplete and ignorantly made out.

The deficit in the gas plant was found to be $24,669.92, with the price of illuminating gas at $1.25 and of fuel gas at $0.50. The price would have to be raised 80%, making it $2.25 and $0.90, to put the plant on a self-sustaining basis.

The deficit in the water works department was $10,077.31, a trifle more than 50% of the total gross income from private consumers. The price of water would have to be raised by that percentage to put the plant in the self-supporting class.

The electric light plant is a wrecked outfit (1914), giving inefficient, unregulated service. The expert investigator informs us that more than $116,000 in outstanding bonds hangs over the plant, which could not bring more than a third of that in a sale.

Complete records of the inefficiency and favoritism and reckless expenditure of the past are unavailable. But if you care to examine the actual workings of municipal ownership, just drop down to Bellefontaine and talk it over with the old timers.

If it doesn't work out there, what assurance have you that it will in Lima?

AN ACCOUNT OF STEWARDSHIP

President Wilson's speech of acceptance was, as anticipated, an account to the American people of stewardship.

For nearly four years he has battled with the most serious problems that in all history any statesman with responsibility and power has ever faced.

Domestic conditions, the result of a half century of governmental laxity and pernicious influences, were his heritage when he assumed the presidency.

All unexpected to his administration came the handling of situations which included a world at war. Not the old-time war, but a new, up-to-date war, with methods a decade ago inconceivable, with cruelties never before to the peace lovers of the world even comprehensible—of a magnitude to paralyze the understanding if not the imagination of men.

His own country beset with ailments that demanded quick remedies and a world aflame was the responsibility that came to him.

Only statesmanship of the loftiest type, only most extraordinary genius for the grasp of affairs could have saved it from disaster and put this country in its present commanding position.

No mariner ever invaded a doubtful sea with more perplexities than President Wilson has been called upon to meet, to grapple with and to solve.

Through it all, he has followed the one unquenchable course—to do the right to all concerned, in the right way.

"I shall seek, as I have always sought," he declared, reviewing the past and outlining his future policies, "to justify the extraordinary confidence reposed in me by striving to purge my heart and purpose of every personal and of every misleading party motive and devoting every energy I have to the service of the nation as a whole, praying that I may continue to have the counsel and support of all forward-looking men at every turn of the difficult business."

To condense any lengthy utterance of the president is difficult. Everything he says is full of path and directly to the point.

He recounted in his address the achievements of his administration. Not boastfully, because "boasting is always an empty business, which pleases nobody but the boaster."

The democratic party, he insisted, has merely done its duty. "It has merely fulfilled its explicit promise."

Digressing, he said: "The republican party was put out of power because of failure, practical failure and moral failure; because it has served special interests and not the country at large; because under the leadership of its preferred and established guides, of those who still make its choices, it had lost touch with the thoughts and needs of the nation and was living in a past age and under a fixed illusion, the illusion of greatness."

Recounting briefly the failures of the republican party, he summarized democratic achievement: "Alike in this domestic field and in the wide field of the commerce of the world, American business and life and industry have been set free to move as they never moved before."

The tariff has been revised, he explained, not on the principle of repelling foreign trade, but upon the principle of encouraging it.

"The laws against trusts have been clarified by definition, with a view to making it plain that they were not directed against big business, but only against unfair business and the pretense of competition."

The supply of currency has by the Federal Reserve act been rendered elastic; commercial credit has been created for the farmers of the country and they now have the standing of other business men in the money market; the workmen of America have been given a veritable emancipation by the legal recognition of a man's labor as part of his life and not a mere marketable commodity; the emancipation of the children of the country has been effected by releasing them from hurtful labor.

In concise form he explained the enactment of complete preparedness.

The lobby has been driven from cover and forced to "substitute solid arguments for private influence."

Speaking of contingencies of the near future, he said: "The republican party's just the party that cannot meet the contingencies of a new age. Squarely meeting the argument of his rival for the presidency, he declared:

"It does not know the way, and it does not wish new conditions. It tried to break away from the old leaders and it could not. They still select its candidates and dictate its policy, still resist change, still hanker after the old conditions, still know no methods of encouraging business but the old methods."

Peace abroad "will have to build its house anew," and he pleaded for a reservation of our strength and our resources for the anxious and difficult days of restoration and healing which must follow.

Denouncing foreign-born intriguers in this country, he said:

"I neither seek the favor nor fear the displeasure of that small alien element among us which puts loyalty to any foreign power before loyalty to the United States."

Addressing himself to the Mexican situation, the president said: "There are men, and noble women too, not a few of our own people, thank God, whose fortunes are invested in great properties in Mexico, who yet see the case with true vision and arrest its issues with true American feeling."

No permanency can be given the affairs of any republic by a title based upon intrigue and assassination. I declared that to be the policy of this administration within three weeks after I assumed the presidency. I here again vow it. I am more interested in the fortunes of oppressed men and pitiful women and children than in any property rights whatsoever."

Problems of the future were dwelt upon. Peace "will not bring us into their presence slowly, gently, with ceremonious introduction, but suddenly and at once the moment the war in Europe is over. We must be ready to mobilize our resources alike of brains and of materials. . . . It is not a future to be afraid of. It is, rather, a future to stimulate and excite us to the display of the best powers that are in us."

This country's insular possessions were discussed frankly and from what has come to be known as the American view point.

And then at home we must see to it that the men who plan and direct our business enterprises shall enjoy definite and settled conditions of law; "a policy accommodated to the freest progress. . . . We have put all kinds of unfair competition under the ban and penalty of the law. We have barred monopoly."

As to labor!

"We must hasten and quicken the spirit and efficiency of labor throughout our whole industrial system everywhere and in all occupations doing justice to the laborer."

And we must do more than justice. We must safeguard life and promote health and safety in every occupation in which they are threatened or imperilled. That is more than justice, and better because it is humanity and justice."

He took in everything that has kinship even to an issue amongst the people. Nothing omitted, nothing extenuated, he covered the entire domain of political variance."

In the amplitude of his discussion nothing was overlooked.

Frank and confident, there was no evasion, no subterfuge, no hiding behind words. He told the administration's whole story, told it modestly and convincingly.

"We are Americans for big America," he said in his peroration, "and rejoice to look forward to the days in which America shall strive to stir the world without irritating it or drawing it on to new antagonisms, when the nations with which we deal shall at last come to see upon what deep foundations of humanity and justice our passion for peace rests."

CINTRA.

There is the charm of uncertainty about Cintra. They will tell you in Portugal, if you plan to go to Cintra, that it is the most wonderful of cities; also, the next man you meet will say that it doesn't amount to much. Artists and poets have indulged in temperamental outbursts over its charm; and their disciplines have made pilgrimages to Cintra and returned disappointed. So there is no telling how it will strike you, and all you can decide in advance is that it seems to affect different people in different ways.

These things being true, it is well to refrain from saying that Cintra is beautiful, that it has a peculiar and individual charm; or that it is commonplace, and hardly worth visiting. It is, however, entirely safe to describe it as a town of some five thousand people, standing on the slopes of a steep hill which is crowned by a Moorish palace. In these statements one can fall back on the irrefragable testimony of the Portuguese census and his own eyesight.

The hill is bold and angular in outline, so that it has been termed in Portuguese poetry a steely crag; but its angles are softened by a dense growth of rich green trees, or whose branches you catch now and again the golden gleam of an orange or lemon. The lemon is a most poetic fruit in its natural habitat, and causes the beholder to wonder why it should have fallen into disrepute and become a term of disrespect, not to say obloquy, in popular usage.

The chief attraction of Cintra is the old Moorish castle which has been likened to the Alhambra. The guide books, however, treat of the castle at length, and so does the Portuguese guide who shows you through. To tour the castle requires ambition and enthusiasm. It is less effort and more in keeping.

PUNCTURELESS AUTO TIRE.

One of the newest ideas in puncture proof auto tires is designed upon the same principle that reinforced concrete structures are built. A frame-work is manufactured in tube form from strong elastic vegetable fiber. A special substance is then poured in to fill up the frame while hot. It solidifies in cooling and becomes elastic and strong enough to resist most road bruises. It is claimed to be more durable than the solid rubber tire and also more elastic. The composition of the filling material is a trade secret.

USE MOTOR TRUCKS FOR SHOW STOCK.

Farm and Fireside, the national farm paper published at Springfield, Ohio, says:

"A breeder of fine Guernseys wished to exhibit sixteen of his best animals at a fair sixteen miles away. There was no direct rail route, and he disliked to drive them that far in hot weather."

"By using a three-ton motor truck he moved them all safely in one day, thereby keeping them fresh and in good condition for exhibition purposes. Up to distances of seventy-five miles, motor trucks compete favorably with railroads in the economy of handling perishable freight. Long trips are usually made at night, when there is little traffic on the roads."

NEW YORK—A night flight of 50 miles in 105 minutes was made by Lawrence B. Sperry over Great South Bay. He used searchlights to guide him.

A GOOD LOSER

"I CAN say I like her," said my friend the other day, "and there is one thing about her that forces my admiration, and that is the fact that she is a good loser."

And indeed she is, this person whom my friend likes and admires because of that one quality. She has had many disappointments, many sorrows, many trials of this life, and she has met every one with a smile, a brave front, and a spirit indomitable.

I know of one particular occasion when the dearest wish of her heart was shattered as one would shatter a glass, and yet with all the pain that must have caused her, not a friend knew of the heart ache this brave woman suffered.

I never knew her well enough to ask her philosophy of life, for indeed she must have one. But I do know that I never saw her without a smile, and never heard her speak without a good word about some one.

I know she is happy. One can see that spirit shining out of her eyes. I know that might sound paradoxical, saying that she had many sorrows, and yet was happy. But I know she is happy, for she finds it through her sorrow. Through a sorrow that gives the desire to help some one more unfortunate than herself, and the love and devotion gained from labor of that sort can drown any such unhappiness as might come to her.

Sometimes I wonder, and I suppose it is a brilliant original thought, if we thought less of ourselves and more of others, if we would have as much unhappiness in our lives as we do? If when we lose we can smile and say "better luck the next time."

A good loser, you know, isn't one who smiles with his lips, but one who carries hope deep in his heart, and no sorrow for himself when he loses, just a little more determination to think a little harder and play a little better the next time. It isn't as easy as it sounds to be a good loser, for very often there are big stakes. But the harder a thing the more worth having, and there is nothing disappointing in attaining the attitude of mind of a good loser. The loser, if he is the right sort, is generally the winner. Another paradox.

Just one sore of man has the right to criticize and to be heard—the man who has earned the right of making some positive contribution himself to an inviolable and superlative important problem.

Miss Esther Caffrey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Caffrey, of West McKibben street, was married at high noon today by Mr. Martin Meyers. The ceremony was performed at the parochial residence. Miss Mabel Devine and Mr. Virgil Meyers attended the young couple. The bride was attired in a navy blue tulle suit, with a blue hat to match. A georgette crepe blouse and a corsage of bride's roses completed her costume. Miss Devine wore a suit of blue chiffon cloth over silk.

Immediately after the ceremony the bridal party went to the home of the bride's parents, where a wedding luncheon was served. The house was decorated with white roses and green ferns, and the color scheme of green and white was carried out in the luncheon. At the bride's table a huge basket of white roses centered the table and green tulle was artistically arranged from the corners.

Miss Caffrey has been connected for several years with the retail department of the Carter and Carroll store, and Mr. Meyers is employed in the carpet and furniture department of the R. T. Gregg store. Both are well known and have many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Meyers left this afternoon on a trip on the lakes, and after their return they will be at home to their friends at 236 Harrison avenue.

ARE MEDICINES LIQUORS.

A certain class of prejudiced and jealous doctors call patent medicines only alcoholic beverages. They will tell you that such and such a medicine contains as much alcohol as a glass of beer or a certain quantity of whiskey; but they do not mention that the beer or whiskey is swallowed at one draught, while only a small quantity of the medicine is taken at one dose. At the same time they will use alcohol quite freely and many in four or five times as great proportions in their own prescriptions.

Such standard remedies as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound use barely enough alcohol to preserve the root and herb extracts; too little to have injurious effects; and, the medicine can be had, if desired, in a non-alcoholic form.—Adv

Being Our Worst at Home

Why Do We Keep Company Manners for Strangers?
Asks Beatrice Fairfax.

MOST of us have peculiar ideas of courtesy. For the chance visitor in our homes we put on our most beautiful garments—physical and mental; and when he is gone we put away our best clothes—of mind and body.

"Home" the place where we are treated best—and grumble most! reads a little aphorism which we don't take seriously enough.

Home seems to be a place for complaints and ingratitude and all our unpleasant irritabilities.

Why under the sun we should give our best to the people who do not care for us and for whom we do not care, I have never been able to see. But still more than that, why we should give second rate and third rate attitudes of mind and body to those whom we love and who love us I cannot understand. But that is what we do.

Of course we all need relaxation. But if we cannot be alert and well clad in body and mind why not give of our best to those to whom that best means something—instead of to the stranger we meet in passing.

Naturally we all want to make good impressions. We want to enhance our circle of acquaintances so that from it we may cull a few friends. But that cannot be accomplished more quickly by rudeness or carelessness in our attitudes towards those who truly love us and whom we truly love.

Gracious and charming manners are possible to all of us, but they lack real charm until they are so easy and accustomed that they are second nature.

And if we cultivate habits of slipshod physical appearance and ungracious mental attitude at home it will be a difficult thing always to offer the world a well groomed physical appearance and a pleasing mental attitude.

Actually it is most inefficient to get into the way of slouching around our homes in untidy costumes and in equally disheveled and unpleasant mental states. At least it pays to practice good manners on those you see every day and all the time.

If you aren't loving enough in your attitude toward your home folk to want to feel that love is due your personality rather than an accident of relationship, your own selfish desire to get on in the world ought to dictate to you the advisability of being amiable "around the house" so that it will be easy for you to be equally amiable out in the world.

Be scrupulous about keeping up appearance even to yourself. Personal fastidiousness has a moral equivalent.

Get into the way of feeling that a tour of inspection of your heart and mind may be imminent any minute. Be like a soldier who is always ready for the inspection tour of his superior officer.

Politeness doesn't mean torn and soiled garments or irritable and dull mental attitudes. It means clean, healthy freedom to sun and air. Ten minutes flat on your back will rest your tired body and mind as well. Take that complete relaxation in the privacy of your own room. But don't constantly inflict your family with a state of semi-relaxation which means being a bore and unamiable creature.

Relax when you are alone. And when you join the family circle, be a real addition to it.

THE FAUROT'S PICTURES.

The Famous Players have made a novel and interesting picture of "Little Lady Eileen" for the Paramount program and Marguerite Clark scores another triumph in the role of an imaginative Irish girl who has never lost her belief in fairies. The Faurot has been crowded all afternoon with delighted spectators, all noting the adorable little star more charming than ever in this new portrayal. The unusual character of the story has enabled the producers to fill the play with many delightful scenes showing the little people of fairyland at their sprightly gambols. Little Lady Eileen cannot take the shortest walk in the woods and fields without seeing at every dell and dingle the little people of Irish folk lore. One of her companions is a cobbler-poet, who has preserved the doings of the faeries in simple verse with the touching faith of a true believer. One of the things he tells her is that by looking into a certain well and repeating a magic formula she will see the face of her future husband. As she looks into the calm waters the man happens by accident in that part of the woods. On seeing a beautiful girl, sylph-like in form and an air of grace enveloping every movement, he becomes interested at once. In a spirit of mischief he tiptoes to the well and looks over her shoulder. And then, well, that would be telling. We won't spoil "Little Lady Eileen" for you by describing the many, many delightful scenes and incidents that follow.

The magnetic little star is supported by a capital cast, including Vernon Steele, John L. Shine, J. K. Murray, Russell Bassett, Harry Lee and Maggie Holloway Fisher, all eminent actors who have won fame on both stage and screen. The settings and photography are artistic and beautiful. This program also contains new Burton Holmes Travel pictures, "In Innsbruck" and the latest edition of the Pathe News.

AT THE STRAND.

The great triangle combination, Sid Coxin, Lizette Thorne and George appear at the Strand today in the two-reel American feature entitled "Ruth Ridley's Return" in which circumstantial evidence miscarries. A stenographer is unjustly accused of the theft of a sum of money and sent to prison on circumstantial evidence. The manner in which the injured girl was reimbursed for the wrong imprisonment makes an interesting story. Besides this is shown a two-reel feature, entitled "As in Days of Old."

MARRYING A BUTTERFLY

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

In Which All Ends Happily for the Reformed Butterfly—and Others.

THANKSGIVING morning dawned bright and clear though a sharp wind blew from the north. The Gordon household was astir at an early hour. "When one has dinner to get for nine people, counting the baby, one must get an early start," Ethel had answered when Ralph had asked why she got up so early on a holiday. It was a pleasant sight to see the little creature bustling about with her preparations. She took the dinner very seriously.

"Now, if the command I shall assign me my duties, I shall be very glad to be used as a first assistant in the kitchen," she had replied against the young lady's incompetence.

"I shall be very glad of assistance in anything but the cooking," was the smiling reply. "Ralph is first assistant in the kitchen," she added, looking mischievously at her husband.

"Very well then, I'll get the dishes out of the way and straighten up the house." The dishes were soon piled on the tea wagon. Ethel meantime enveloped in a voluminous apron and her cook book propped up before her on the kitchen table began preparing the stuffing for the day's feast. The fat turkey for the day's feast. There never was such a bird. Everybody agreed to that when he was not before them brown to a turn. Ralph meanwhile, stuffed into an apron, of which Ethel now had a fine display, was preparing vegetables, sharpening knives and making himself generally useful. When the turkey was finally safe in the baker with his feet in the air as if begging for quarter, the little housekeeper sank into chair breathless with the strain, and dropped her hands in her lap.

"Now, Ralph, I am going to make the pies and I want to be alone or I shall forget something, so you go into the living room with your mother. Perhaps you had better start the fire in the grate." Ralph was divested of his apron and Ethel left alone began carefully measuring the ingredients for her pies. Ralph however did not seem able to keep away from the kitchen and returned each time with a floured coat and a beaming face.

"It has come out all right," the mother contentedly nodded her head, "but what a narrow escape they had. I want to know that fine old woman who woke up our sleeping beauty." The dinner was a pronounced success and all the guests were loud in their praises, but Ethel's eyes sought the rugged friendly face of Old Lady

Nine Straight Is Lima's Record Just Compiled

The Independents made it nine straight when they defeated the Marion Questions Sunday and the Cleveland Perfection Springs, Labor day. Yesterday's game was forced into extra innings, when the count at the end of the ninth stood at five all. Joe Egan again proved himself the hero of the game. With two runs behind in the tenth, Flannery, the first man up tripled to left, Harrison grounded out, Carroll went to first on a free ticket, Costello grounded to Patton, who threw to Hummell to retire Carroll. Hummell fumbled the ball. Long hit towards shortfield, but the ball hit Carroll who was going to third. Carroll was declared out. With Costello on third and Long on first and two men out, the mighty Joe Egan turned a defeat into victory for the Lima lads by laying one out for three bases, scoring Costello and Long, which proved just enough runs to cop the game. The fans went wild over Egan's drive. A majority of the fans ran over to the bench to congratulate him while one fan thrust a dollar bill into his hand. Every man on the Lima club got credit for one or more hits in Monday's game. Carroll and Long led the Lima sluggers, the former getting two hits out of three times at bat while the latter secured three singles out of six trips to the plate. Patton was the heavy stickler for the visitors, being credited with a triple and two singles out of five times at bat. Eleven extra base hits were made in this game, eight of them going for three bases.

Carroll won two games in as many days. After downing the Marion Questions by the score of 11 to 1, he came right back at the strong Cleveland club and pitched an 8 to 7 victory. In Sunday's game features were plentiful. With the bases full in the third inning, Herrin drove the ball to deep left, for a circuit clout, cleaning the bases. Chick Long made the prettiest one-handed catch of a ground ball that has ever been seen on the local ground. McClellan's two-base hit, on an attempted bunt, was also quite a feature. The only real ball player on the Marion team was Price, stationed in the center garden. Price made some wonderful throws to the infield.

The Independents will be out for their tenth straight next Sunday when they step up against the fast club from St. Marys. Sunday's Game. Marion . . . 0 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 0 1 7 7 Lima . . . 1 2 6 0 0 0 0 1 * 11 10 1 Batteries—Shrock and Anderson; Carroll, Flannery and Herrin.

SPORT NEWS

BY HAROLD GENSEL

Celmar Is Winner In the Fifth

More than 600 persons witnessed the fight yesterday afternoon between Coleman and Johnny Celmar, in which the first named was knocked out in the fifth round at Delphos. The bout, which was to have gone 20 rounds nearly came to end in the third, when Celmar was sent to the mat, but was able to rise before the count of 10. In the fifth round the order of things was reversed, when Celmar sent his opponent to the mat. The victim of this knockdown was unable to rise before the count of ten. The preliminary bout between Young Masterpole and Bruno Sutter was declared a draw by the referee in the tenth round.

SHORT SPORT

Both races have now tightened up to the breaking point of enthusiasm. After holding the lead practically all year the Dodgers were forced to give way to the Braves. But the Dodgers still have hopes. They play the Giants a series beginning today, while the Phillies and Braves tackle one another. In the meantime the shadow of the jungle is hovering over the Red Sox. The Tigers are only ten points behind the world's champions and going strong. The Red Sox must face a battery of A-1 western clubs on their trip to the land of the setting sun, while the Tigers camp on their own land to face the weaker easterners. Christy Mathewson and Minor Brown had an old-time battle yesterday. But the veterans did not show the effectiveness of old. Thirty-three hits were made off them. The White Sox are also looming up strong in the pennant fight. The double victory over the Browns boosted them up to within 21 points of the Red Sox.

Welsh Is Too Fast For White

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Sept. 5.—The question of Freddie Welsh's superiority over Charley White or vice versa probably never will be decided. The battle that was to have settled this mooted question has ambled on into pugilistic history and over the arena where the fight was staged, there hovers an odor which White's adherents hold to be rank, and Welsh's friends declare to be sweet and pure. Billy Roche's decision to allow the champion to retain his title unquestionably was an unpopular one with the ringside customers, as evidenced by the deluge of cushions and pop bottles that followed his announcement. But as an old timer lingering here pointed out today, in four weeks the boxing public will, for the most part, have forgotten the affair. Welsh will still have his crown and whatever chance the Chicagoan may have had to prove his superiority will have gone where the green grass goes in the fall time. The public remembers only the black and white statement in the record book. The experts at the ringside were as hopelessly divided in their opinions as were the spectators and principals themselves. Some thought that Roche gave the only decision he could under the circumstances. Others unhesitatingly pronounced it a steal. In one respect, however, even White's friends admitted that his fight was somewhat disappointing. Charley had been pictured as a rushing, terrible tiger with a wicked kick in either hand, and likely to tear Freddie's head off with that left hook. But Charley was very docile and not once did he even come close to putting the bee on the champion. Welsh came just as near knocking out White as White did Welsh. Welsh said today he was going up in Canada shortly with his wife and children. He will take part in some exhibitions up there as benefits for war relief work. White and Lewis, his manager, will probably go back to Chicago in a few days. The Hundred Million club which staged the Welsh-White fight stood to make a small profit on the show if it can escape damage suits resulting from the collapse of the grandstand. Eight thousand persons saw the battle at an estimated cost of $5 each, which would make the total receipts approximately $40,000. The cost of staging the show is figured around $35,000.

FIGHT RESULTS

Freddie Welsh won the decision over Charley White in 26 rounds at Colorado Springs. Kid Williams beat Frankie Brown in six rounds at Baltimore. Johnny Griffiths beat Joe Rivers in 12 rounds at Canton, Ohio.

Cycle Races Are Best Ever Held At Driving Park

More than 3,000 persons attended the most successful motorcycle races ever held at Lima Driving park, yesterday afternoon. The classy field of entries at the start of the races clearly demonstrated their ability by clipping seconds off former records for the local track. One of the best events of the day closed the program. This was the one mile time trial. "Shorty" Matthews, mounted on an Indian, the winner of this event was awarded the handsome silver trophy purchased by the Lima Chamber of Commerce. Matthews negotiated the mile in 1.09, which is 4-5 of a second faster than previously made on the track. Charles Smith, the local lad, riding an Indian, was a runner-up in all the events he entered. Although he has been in the game but a few years he is fast coming to the front and is already being classed as one of the best racers in the business. However, Matthews was easily the big man of the day, as he was the winner of first place in four events on the program. Matthews won the first position in the first five-mile event, with Charles Smith and Ralph Marshall second and third. Charles Sudduth, riding an Indian, took the first prize in the second heat of the five-mile event, with Paul Wilisus and Rollie Blume second and third. Samuel Goshorn, riding an Excelsior, won the three-mile side car event in 4.19. Carl Watt finished second. Matthews won the 10-mile event in 11.43.1-2. Wilkins and Smith finished second and third. Matthews finished at the head of the procession in the 25-mile race. His time in turning the 50 laps was 28:49.3-5. The five-mile consolation race was won by Blume. The time was 6.17.2. Marshall and Rowe finished second and third. Mayor B. H. Simpson officially opened the meet when he delivered an address to the crowded grandstand occupants. Immediately following he rode around the track in a side car. President Kent W. Hughes of the Lima Chamber of Commerce presented the trophy purchased by that organization to the winner of the one-mile time trial event.

Mothers—This Child Was Cured of Bed-Wetting

Mrs. C. W. Peters, Lanham, Pa., writes: "My six-year-old girl has been bed-wet since she was a baby. I found no relief until I tried your sample of Foley's Kidney Pills. I saw them in the paper and bought a box. The first day she was better and she is altogether cured. Thanks to Foley's Kidney Pills for the benefit I have found in them. As it takes a lot of washing out of the house, I have found it a great relief. I found the cure."

Parents no longer need to punish a child for bed-wetting. Instead, they improve the child's physical condition, until the annoying and mortifying act is done away with.

A few simple rules added by the use of Foley's Kidney Pills will stop a bed-wetting habit. It is caused by obstruction of the kidneys of the parts. They are sold in bottles of 25 and 50 pills. Write to Dr. J. C. Foley & Co., 2415 Broadway, Chicago, and send them your letter on bed-wetting to any one asking for it.

HOW THIN PEOPLE OB- TAIN A PLUMP STRONG ROBUST BODY.

"Before I took tonoline people used to call me 'skinny,' but now my name is changed. My whole body is stout. Have gained 15 lbs. and am gaining yet. I look like a new man," declared F. P. Smith, Pittsburg, Pa., who had just finished the tonoline treatment.

Would you, too, like to quickly put from 10 to 30 lbs. of good, solid,
"stay-there" flesh, fat and muscular tissue between your skin and bones?
Don't say it can't be done. Try it. Let us send you free a 50c package of tonoline and prove what it can do for you.

Butler's Drug Store and Thompson's Drug Store are dispensing a great deal of tonoline.

More than half a million thin men and women have gladly made this test and that tonoline does succeed, does make thin folks fat even where all else has failed, is best proved by the tremendous business we have done. No drastic diet, flesh cream, massage, oils or emulsions, but a simple, harmless home treatment.
Cut out the coupon and send for this Free package today.

Take tonoline with your meals and watch it work. This test will tell the story.

will be kept here in the Ohio Archeological and Historical museum. The remains were shipped from Portsmouth, and although the people who at one time animated the bodies lived in Ohio all their lives, no one of them ever saw a train, an electric car or light.

The remains were the skeletons of 402 mound builders dug up this summer at Portsmouth by W. C. Mills, curator of the museum. The mound builders' village site was found five miles north of Portsmouth, on the farm of William Feurt, and there were three mounds within a short distance of the village site.

According to the curator the village site comprised about seven acres and it is thought that at one time several thousand persons lived there.
Rows of remains of tepees and fireplaces were found, showing that the village was laid out along streets.

Mound builders, insofar as known, lived a life very similar to that of other Indians, except that they were slightly more civilized than the average Indian of their time, and that they buried their dead in great mounds instead of placing the bodies on elevated platforms, as did most tribes.

The average mound builder was of a slightly smaller stature than the average white man of today, and he probably did not live as long, as the sanitary conditions in which he existed were not conducive to health and longevity. There were no indications of sewers or other protective measures found in the villages, and infant mortality is thought to have been high.

Although room is getting to be at a premium in the museum, the more complete skeletons and many of the stone and bone utensils and instruments found with the bodies will be preserved and given room for exhibition. It is thought that an addition to the museum will shortly have to be built, as the remaining space is rapidly being filled with exhibits that are being gathered from throughout the state.

WONDERFUL FOREST OF TATOI IS NOW A HEAP OF ASHES

Hundreds of Soldiers and Shepherds Lose Their Lives in Disaster.

King Constantine, With Bodyguards, Attempts to Fight Flames.

ATHENS, Aug. 30.—The wonderful forest of Tatoi, the pride of the late King George of Greece, and the summer home of his son, King Constantine, is no more. The once heavily wooded slopes of Mt. Parnes are as naked today as those of Mt.
Pentelicon or any other of the Attic hills. The tens of thousands of dollars spent in cultivating a flourishing pine wood, as an example of what might be done with forestry in barren Attica, have been burned up as completely as if the banknotes themselves had been thrown in the fire. The lives of three officers, 120 soldiers and an unknown number of shepherds and villagers have added tragedy to the disaster.

King Constantine's villa is a heap of ashes. Even the age-old pines surrounding the grave of King George were felled to save the tomb itself from desecration. Only the old king's palace, now the property of the dowager Queen Olga, remains, saved by the fact that an open space had been left about the buildings for the sake of the view.

Over a month of unprecedented drouth in Greece and a consistent mean temperature in the neighborhood of 110 degrees in the shade has turned the whole of Greece into a basket of dry sticks. For a fortnight before the fire at Tatoi reports had been coming in from Missolonghi, Patras, Megara and the forest of Thebes, Kifissia, Chalois, Camariza, Trichonia, Manes, Fyrgos, Agoulinita and the island of Scyros of forest fires in which millions of trees were being destroyed. The fire at Megara and in the forest of Kifissia is still raging and is already greater in extent than that of Tatoi.

It was only upon the morning of the fourteenth, however, that the general plague spread to the vicinity of the capital. The fire is supposed to have started near the ancient fortress known as the Palaeokastro or Katsimidi, in a dingle near the summit of Mt. Parnes, only some four miles from the wind-blown slopes of the Chateau of Dekelia at Tatoi. In a few hours the flames spread over an advancing front of six miles and were sweeping down the slopes of Mt. Parnes, where Sophocles lies buried, with the royal summer palace directly in their path.

At once the order was given to remove the furniture of the royal villa to Athens. The king himself, accompanied by the chief of his personal bodyguard, Captain Elie Chry-sopaths, by Lieutenant Colonel Dellaportis and Lieutenant Kouloum-poulos, took automobiles and went towards the advancing flames. Four regiments of infantry were ordered from Athens and one from Chalcis to try to stop the fire, but the parched pines were like tinder, and nothing could be done. The acrid smoke obscured everything, sweeping in clouds even to Athens. An entire company of infantry was surrounded by the fire, few escaping un-scorched and some 26 burned beyond recognition.

Retreat Cut Off.
The flames approached so rapidly
the place where King Constantine and his three companions were stationed that the sovereign found his retreat cut off, and was forced to leap down some 18 feet into a gully, spraining his ankle so badly that it was with the greatest difficulty he was able to proceed further. Corporal Alexiadis came upon the monarch in this state and half-carrying him managed to get the king to a place of safety. King Constantine has made the corporal
a knight of the Order of the Savior for his heroism.

Meanwhile Colonel Dellaportis,
Captain Chrysopaths and Lieutenant Kouloumopoulos, blinded by the smoke, were unable to find their way out of the forest. All three were burned alive.

At 5 o'clock in the afternoon, it was deemed necessary for the queen and her children to flee Tatoi for Athens. An hour and a half later the king himself was forced to leave, after having given orders to cut the trees around his father's tomb, to isolate it from the flames.
By night the fire had cut the northern railway to Larissa and destroyed the telephone and telegraph wires. The whole sky to the north of Athens was reddened by the flames, which rapidly approached Kephissia, seven and a half miles from Tatoi and only eight and a half miles from Athens.

Many Panic-Stricken.
Kephissia is fashionable suburb of the Greek capital, where the greater part of Athenian society is established in villas for the summer.
Panic seized the inhabitants of Kephissia and during the night many feverishly packed their belongings against a move the first thing in the morning. A sudden shift of the wind, however, began to drive the flames back up the slopes of Mt. Parnes and Kephissia was left unharmed.

A Te Deum was held in the cathedral for the saving of the lives of the king and the royal family, and a state funeral service, attended by all the members of the royal family save the king, confined to the palace by his swollen ankle, for the three officers who had lost their lives in the flames. As many bodies of soldiers as had been found up to yesterday were also interred, most of them so charred as to render identification impossible. More bodies are being brought in, but few are recognizable.

Some 100,000 trees were destroyed as well as four small villages in the royal garage, seven automobiles were burned. The royal villa was insured for $40,000. King Constantine and his family will move into the Chateau of Kekelia, the property of Queen Olga, who is now in Russia.

The site of Tatoi has played a large part in the history of Greece.
Here at the suggestion of Alcibiades the Spartans established themselves in 413 B. C. to cut off the supply of grain and foodstuffs bound into Athens from Euboea, with the purpose of starving out the Athenian population. And in 404

B. C. while Lysander blockaded Athens and the Piræus by sea, the Spartans descended from the vicinity of Tatoi, attacked and forced the capitulation of Athens, ending the Peloponnesian war.

He Was Worried and Hopeless.
"For ten years I was bothered with kidney trouble," writes T. F. Hutchinson, Little Rock, Ark. "I was worried and had almost given up all hopes. I used five boxes of Foley Kidney Pills and am now a well man." H. F. Vorkamp. tu-th-st

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast a Splendid Habit

Open sluices of the system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise, splitting headache, stuffy nose, cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the poisonous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter of a pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone who is bothered with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.
